Plastic on the Sofa: Transparent Tales

Join Storyteller Susan Stone as she shares stories, traditional and personal, with her usual wry sense of humor. Come hear about the family feud and ancient Aunt Sadie on the plastic-covered sofa; about what happens when your house becomes a treasure trove of ancient schmutz... about the robbery in the laundry and... Jewish tales of humor and wisdom. Lots more.

Saturday, November 3 at 7:00 PM

at the Life Together Center, 3625 N. Sheridan Rd.

Call Mary Claire to leave reservations: 309-510-9231

$8 in advance / $10 at the door

For those who want to learn more about creating stories,
Susan is also offering a workshop:

The Narrator: A Mysterious Character in our Stories

Whether a personal tale or a traditional one, the narrator makes an appearance. Who is she/he? What is her opinion about the action in the tale? Is he giving information or subtly making us view the story in a different way? We all, experienced or not, are in search of the right voice for our narrators. Come and play and learn who this mysterious character is. Play... and be reminded.

Sunday, November 4, at 1:00-2:30 PM

at Peoria Christian School Library, 3506 N. California Ave.

Award-winning storyteller and teaching artist, Susan Stone has been performing for audiences around the country for over thirty years. Stories of rabbis and demons, angels and fools – wise women too – populate Susan's tales. She tells stories with authenticity and skill from many sources, as well personal stories – all to entertain, enlighten, and illuminate the human condition.
